PREAMBLE:

- Visionary and proactive organisations the world over, are increasingly utilising Mediation and Conciliation as primary mechanisms for resolving disputes, thereby strengthening their internal structures, sustaining business/organisational relationships and positively impacting their public image.
- Many states in Nigeria have introduced reforms in their Civil Procedure to provide for Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) mechanisms, especially Mediation.
- The Ministries of Justice in Benue, Delta, Enugu, Lagos, Ondo, Rivers etc., are using their Citizens' Mediation Centres to resolve disputes amicably, thereby promoting peace and harmonious co-existence.
- Multi-Door Courthouses have been set up in Abia, Abuja, Kano, Lagos, Maiduguri, Uyo and other states are about establishing same for the amicable resolution of disputes using Mediation and other ADR processes.

Sequel to the above, it is obvious that organisations and professionals without requisite knowledge and skills in ADR processes, especially Mediation, will soon be losing clients as they cannot effectively represent their clients or expand their practices and businesses. It is therefore recommended that institutions, organisations and individuals update their knowledge and practice of ADR so that they can take advantage of developments mentioned above as well as redesign their own dispute resolution procedures to make them more client/customer-friendly, time-saving and cost effective.
